10th Gatersleben Research Conference "Sequence-informed Crop Research" - online abstract submission and registration started!

We are pleased to announce that the website for online abstract submission and registration for the 10th Gatersleben Research conference has been launched recently. Please come and visit us at <http://meetings.ipk-gatersleben.de/GRCX/index.php>. The 10th Gatersleben Research Conference, will be held November 22nd - 24th, 2010. In light of the ongoing progress in the field of genomics, the focus of the conference is "Sequence-informed Crop Research" and the program will address a broad spectrum of fundamental and applied aspects of the topic.

Traditionally, the meeting will be attended by around 150 participants, led by outstanding international keynote speakers. This format provides excellent opportunities to stimulate scientific discussion and interact with international colleagues involved in plant genomics, a rapidly-evolving field with research in genetic diversity, chromatin dynamics, genome evolution, and data handling. Communication is the spirit of the Gatersleben Research Conferences.

The venue of the first day is held in the UNESCO world heritage town of Quedlinburg (www.quedlinburg.de), with its preserved city center of medieval origin distinguished by its exceptional architectural heritage of Romanesque and half-timbered buildings. The second and third day of the program will be held at the nearby Leibniz-Institute for Plant Genetics and Crop Plant Research (IPK) in Gatersleben.

Since the conference will allow only up to 150 participants, please record the following important dates as well as important information about accommodation and traveling connections:
